"how did you do that?" "what pencil did you use?" and particularly one that asked "please can you make a tutorial?" so this kinda inspired me to make a step-by-step guide on how to draw but dont hate me if i'm not that helpful okay :see_no_evil: :joy: first time doing this so lets just see how it goes :ok_hand: [this is the image I drew :information_desk_person: :firstlyyyyy... I used any B pencil but a 6B for dark areas - its all about how hard you press the pencil on the paper so doesnt matter which one you use for light shading :information_desk_person: :9 just helps having the highest B pencil when you want black areas :see_no_evil: so first you can either trace the outline for more accuracy or what i do - observe the outlines on the image and sometimes measure the proportions with your pencil and thumb: shown below...paint on my thumb btw :joy: when drawing, i always start with the left side of the image because i don't want to ruin the right side with my hand by smudging it if my hand is resting on the paper :see_no_evil: I first started with the hand, adding different shades of grey/black by using a bit of cross hatching. I also use the rubber for a bit of highlight or to lighten up some dark areas such as the knuckles! then moved on to a bit of the hair and added darker tones... heres some examples below because i'm not good at explaining :joy: this is just an example of adding dark to light if that helps? just pressure of pushing the pencil downanother tip is to chip a bit of rubber off if you want to get small/detailed highlight in the drawing or made tiny mistakes and don't want to destroy all of it with a whole rubber. its good for like highlights in the hair :wink: I then moved on to the left eye (doesnt matter which order you start with) and added the dark shadow, darkened the outline of the eye and added the pupil before shading in the colour of the eye then moved onto the space around the eyes, the shading of the cheek and the nose. using a tiny piece of rubber to add the light areas really helped creating a realistic skin effect. just keep adding pressure for dark tones and be lighter in weight with lighter shades (really bad at describing sorry :weary: :with the other eye, I did the same with the pupil and colour but added a small shine in the middle of the pupil to make it more realistic (and found in original image). i also added shading around the eyeball to also make it realistic :ok_hand: :giving a highlight on the brow bone gives it a good effect too :blush: (sorry i'm so bad at explaining :joy: :then started doing the left cheek with more shading and then the lips by gradually going from dark to light from the middle to the upper lip. add light in the middle of the bottom lip for a more dimensional effect on the plumpness on the lip (plumpness is probably a made up word by me ffs :joy:) and do the upper lip method on the top of the chin (if that makes sense? just look at the picture :joy:)! then did the left sleeve and a bitmore of the hair. the sleeve: just use a high B (6,7 or 8 - whatever is the highest) and colour it in but leave highlight at the top of the sleeve due to the light shining on it. in the imagefinishing the whole hair: just addin light shades from the top and bottom of each steak of hairs and around. lines of each piece of hair and highlight with rubbermoving on to the right ear, i first added the dark inner lines of the curves and earrings on the ear and then add shading around them and using the tiny rubber to erase for highlight (i say that a lot but thats all i really do :joy:)! then finished most of the face by adding shading to the jaw, chin and cheek bone. use a big rubber to add highlight on the cheek bone and then darken it below (like contour :joy:). just keep looking at the images for a guide like with the chin and jaw line :joy: finished colouring in the sleeve and light shades in the collarthe neck has various shades/lines on it so just be careful with the accuracy of the outline and detail (i'm so bad at this tutorial :joy:)! finally did the right collar by adding various lines and shades to create a clothing crease effect...and here is the finished drawing... drum roll please.....ta daaa... okay tbh i wish i could've done better because i dont think its looks exactly like tae but too me a long time than usual to do and it was just a tutorial on drawing with shading so :fist:if it helped you - youre welcome :blush: if it didn't - i'm sorry :joy: try looking at youtube videos instead bc you can actually see the movement and process :joy: if you want me to do like a time lapse then i mght in the summer when i'm not busy af :joy: but thank you for reading and byyyyeeee :information_desk_person: :gupdate: so thankful for being featured omg :weary: and the username in the drawing is my twitter: see_no_evil: Im going to be using this photo of jimin and jhope for my drawing.
